1、题目及其大意

Some people believe famous people's support towards international aid organizations draws the attention to problems, while others think celebrities make the problems less important. Discuss both views and give your opinion.

2、思路提纲

3、高分范文示例

Nowadays, international aid groups are using popular personalities as their ambassadors for a good cause. Some say these renowned persons help draw attention to social issues, but others opine that they only make the social concerns less significant. I must say that both sides are sensible.

On the one hand, celebrities are no doubt impactful because of their huge fan base. With such many followers, if they promote something, say, an environmental project like tree planting or an event for human rights, their call for supporters will surely appeal to their fans. A good case in point is the most celebrated group called BTS from Korea. When BTS members donate to charity, they inspire their fans called the "Army" to do the same. Specifically, the Army raised US$1 million for Black Lives Matter and US$83,000 for Typhoon Vamco victims after BTS members called for aid.

On the other hand, it is no denying that celebrities' stardom overshadows the social issue they are promoting. In most cases, fans are not genuinely interested in the social issue but their idols. They are more concerned about who they are with, what they will wear, and what their scandals are just like Taylor Swift or Paris Hilton, who have been infamous in the entertainment industry for those matters. They are not willing to support the international aid groups, but their superstars. All these make the problems less important to the public.

In conclusion, I concur that well-known individuals can surely promote a global issue considering their vast followers. However, it is not always the case as some of their fans are only interested in them and not the issue they are promoting, which makes it less relevant.

1、题目及其大意

Some people say that the government should regard health care as the first priority, but some others believe that there are more important priorities to spend the tax payers' money. Discuss both views and give your opinion.

2. 思路提纲

3、高分范文示例

Currently, there is an ongoing discussion about whether the authorities should prioritize citizens' health or utilize the taxes they collect for other essential sectors. I opine that both sides have merits.

On the one hand, some people advocate prioritizing health care because access to quality health services is a basic human right. If people regularly pay their taxes and their leaders ignore their health needs, it constitutes a significant neglect of government responsibility. Moreover, a country lacking adequate health care provisions, such as free check-ups and vaccines, is unlikely to function well. Specifically, insufficient hospitals, medical professionals, medicines, and treatments can lead to increased cases of epidemics and deaths. In contrast, a healthier populace can boost the economy, as they are more productive and less frequently ill.

On the other hand, it cannot be denied that countries also face pressing issues beyond health care, such as inadequate education. If the government fails to invest in this sector, the economy and the country's level of innovation may suffer. By using taxpayers' money to purchase updated educational tools, renovate schools, build new ones, and increase teachers' salaries, economic growth and innovation are likely to follow. Furthermore, infrastructure development is also crucial. Daily, we rely on public transportation, railways, and roads. If these are adequate and effectively maintained, countries can obtain economic development and gain numerous conveniences since it reduces risk of accidents and improves travel time.

In conclusion, while it is undeniable that health care should be given significant priority due to its role in ensuring a basic human right and supporting a country's effective functioning, I concur that federal leaders should also invest in other areas such as infrastructure and education.

Word count: 280

4、高分词汇或表达

1、题目及其大意

With growing population in cities, more and more people live in a home with small or no outdoor areas. Is it a positive or negative development?

2、思路提纲

3、高分范文示例

Nowadays, the increasing city demographic has led to a phenomenon wherein more and more individuals are residing in homes with either limited or no outdoor spaces. I believe this is a negative development overall.

Admittedly, by constructing homes with small or no outdoor sections, cities are able to accommodate the ever-growing population. However, this architectural strategy has several undesirable long-term consequences, particularly on residents' health. For instance, without an outdoor area such as a garden or a patio, people may be unable to breathe fresh air or get sufficient exposure to natural sunlight—both of which contribute significantly to health and overall well-being. In fact, a lack of fresh air and natural light can lead to vitamin D deficiency and weakened immunity. Likewise, this lack of access to greenery for relaxation may result in stress, anxiety, or depression. Therefore, when people are confined to small living spaces with little to no access to outdoor areas, it can ultimately undermine their physical health and, in some cases, their mental health as well.

Furthermore, I believe this trend negatively affects people's ability to socialize. There is no denying that outdoor spaces often serve as ideal settings for social interaction. Unfortunately, without such areas, residents cannot enjoy activities such as gardening with their neighbors, having tea with family, or spending time outside playing with their children. All these experiences enhance community bonding and personal relationships, and their absence can diminish people's quality of social life.

In conclusion, while I admit that modern times require space-efficient housing solutions to meet the growing demand for city accommodation, I still concur that the lack of outdoor space remains a negative phenomenon. It can adversely impact both health and social well-being—two essential components of a fulfilling life.

1、题目及其大意

New technologies have changed the way children spend their free time. Do you think the advantages outweigh the disadvantages?

一种现象 — 新技术改变了儿童度过空闲时间的方式
问题 — 优势大于劣势吗？

2、思路提纲

我的意见或立场 — 我认为，这种现象弊大于利

这种现象的优点 — 帮助儿童学习

- 使用大量信息和其他学习资源
- 通过互联网上的视频，图像和录音学习
 - 通过在线课程获取知识
 - 通过社交媒体，YouTube玩得开心

这种现象的缺点 — 导致儿童成瘾

- 电子游戏令人上瘾
- 玩游戏时失去控制 — 错过家庭作业或考试不及格
- 技术对健康的不利影响
 - 在计算机和电视上花费太多时间
 - 导致姿势不良、肥胖、近视

3、高分范文示例

Nowadays, brought by the advent of high technology, various forms of recreation have changed the manner youngsters utilize their leisure time. I opine that this phenomenon has more drawbacks than benefits.

On the one hand, new technologies as a way to spend free time aid children's study. For example, considering the vast information and other learning resources such as videos, images, and audio recordings available on the Internet, children can use, say, their weekends to be more knowledgeable in multiple fields while staying at home. The recent COVID-19 pandemic, as a good case in point, obstructed the usual in-person schooling and outdoor activities in many countries. Thanks to computers and the Internet, students were able to have fun online through social media such as YouTube or acquire numerous new knowledge through online course providers like LinkedIn Learning.

On the other hand, new technologies also pose undesirable effects on how children spend their spare time, one of which is addiction. Electronic games, for instance, are addicting due to the loss of control when playing. Thus, most schoolchildren, according to many surveys, miss their homework or fail their exams as the majority of their time is spent on e-gaming than on their studies.

The adverse impact of technologies on health cannot be ignored as well. To illustrate, more and more youngsters are disbursing too much time in front of their computers and TVs. This undeniably results in some health dilemmas such as poor posture, obesity, shortsightedness, and many more.

In conclusion, while technological advancements exert some obvious positives, I concur that its negatives, namely poor academic performance and inferior health, are worth higher regard.

The graphs below show the sales of tickets in cinema and individual spending on film tickets between 1985 and 2015

2、思路提纲

3、高分范文示例

The line charts display the revenues of tickets in theaters in three decades and the per-person expense on movie tickets during the same span of time.

Overall, both the sales of tickets and spending of every individual on purchasing tickets for films experienced uptrends between 1985 and 2015, although the former had an initial fluctuation.

When it comes to the number of tickets sold in cinemas, it was approximately 400 million in 1985. Nonetheless, after climbing to 600 million or thereabouts five years later, the figure minimally lessened in 1995. In the remaining years, there was a constant ascent, and the sales arrived at the highest point of around 950 million in 2015.

Concerning the individual outlay on film tickets, it amounted to nearly 40 dollars at first. In addition to that, it grew unsteadily by roughly 20 dollars until 2000 before rising more stably in the subsequent years, reaching 100 dollars or so at the end of the period.

The charts below show percentages of energy production made from three kinds of sources in different places between 2003 and 2008.

2、思路提纲

3、高分范文示例

The pie charts compare various countries in terms of their energy output from different sources during a five-year span of time.

All in all, between 2003 and 2008, while Sweden and Morocco relied mainly on nuclear energy and hydropower, successively, Vietnam and India both primarily used fossil fuel to generate power. On the contrary, excluding Sweden, where fossil fuel was utilized the least, nuclear had the smallest proportion in the other nations, with Vietnam not using it at all.

To be specific, in Sweden, half of its total production came from nuclear power, whereas merely 15% was generated from fossil fuel. In comparison, 55% of energy output was from hydropower in Morocco, with only 2% being produced from nuclear energy.

As for Vietnam and India, the figures for fossil fuel were 75% and 65%, correspondingly. While the remaining part of the former country was solely created from hydropower, the two other resources unevenly shared the portion left in the latter, with nuclear only comprising 5%.

Word Count: 165

United States	141	190	215

2、思路提纲

3、高分范文示例

The given chart provides information regarding the aggregate amounts of rubbish made in various urban areas in several nations in three separate years spanning two decades.

Generally, except for the fluctuations observed in South Korea and Poland, the disparate countries had varying scopes of growth in the amounts of waste produced, with the US always having the most sizeable waste production.

Particularly, the figure for waste output in cities and towns of the US grew from 141 million to 215 million tonnes between 1980 and 2000. Japan experienced an upward tendency in its garbage production as well, although at a much lower extent, reaching 52 million tonnes in 2000, whilst those of Portugal and Ireland had minimal increments, both of which not exceeding 5 million tonnes throughout the years.

On the other hand, the tonnage of waste in the other two countries both fluctuated. Starting at 25 million tonnes, the amount in Korea rose to its peak of 31 million tonnes in 1990 before declining by 12 million tonnes in the end. As for Poland, it marginally oscillated at around 10 million tonnes during the given time frame.

Word Count: 189
